

Hello,

Thank you for providing this forum for the public to voice their opinions on cell phone use during flights. I agree with the thousands of comments you've received that support continuing the ban. Everyday people are forced to listen to other people's cell phone conversations in public areas such as on the bus, in the grocery store, public restrooms, and restaurants. Luckily in these situations people have the choice to move to another seat, walk away, use another restroom, move to another table or leave the scene completely. This is not a reality in a flight situation, as people are forced to remain in their seats and endure a conversation if it does take place, no matter how inappropriate or how loud or how disruptive it may be.

Thank you for your time,
Melissa
